

Rocky View Needs Change

Rocky View Forward has been accused of being “negative naysayers”

To set the record straight, we’d like you to ask – what is negative?

Is it negative to expect transparency and accountability from your elected officials?

Is it negative to want your council to represent your interests – the interests of the people who call Rocky View home?

Is it negative to insist that council protects its residents and the environment when it approves new gravel pits?

The pro-development lobby group insists we all should be positive.

We’d like you to ask – what is positive?

Is it positive for a council majority to push through massive development applications that not only go against policy but have no resident support?

Is it positive for a council majority to bully anyone who questions or opposes them?

Is it positive for a council majority to insist we have low tax rates, but ignore the fact that Rocky View residents pay more taxes than our urban counterparts for considerably less services?

This same pro-development lobby group pulls the puppet strings directing the council majority and insists residents have no positive solutions.

We’d like you to ask – are these solutions positive?

A council that puts our financial house in order

A council that creates community buy-in before approving new development

A council that insists that development pays for itself and is properly serviced

A council that focuses on improving the quality of life for those who already live here

A council that communicates effectively with its residents

The big developers have called the shots in Rocky View for too long.

It’s time for you, the residents, to take control of your local government.
